CALL 4 OFFICIALS BEFORE FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

To Tell Why Bill Should Be Passed for Arming of U. S.
Merchant Ships

QUESTIONED TODAY

To Testify for President's Urgent Request for Guns
On Vessels

By William S. Neal
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—Four of the Administration's highest officials appear before the House Foreign Affairs Committee today to tell why a bill should be passed authorizing the arming of American merchant ships, as non-interventionists sought to heal a split in their ranks.

Called to testify for President Roosevelt's urgent request to place guns on the vessels were Secretary of State Cordell Hull; Secretary of the Navy Knox; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; and Admiral Emory Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission. Hull, who has urged that the Neutrality Act be scrapped, was expected to declare that Adolf Hitler has embarked upon unrestricted submarine warfare and that American ships must be protected.

Committee members said Land would say that speed in raming ships is necessary because it is planned to put 135 American ships into service carrying war supplies to the British in the Middle East.

Aged Croydon Woman Is Buried in Philadelphia

CROYDON, Oct. 13—Burial took place in Philadelphia on Saturday for Mrs. Mary Ann Ruth, who was found dead at her home on Pennsylvania avenue on Wednesday.

The aged woman, who had recently marked her 85th birthday anniversary, had apparently been in good health. When an ice dealer called at her home on Wednesday he received no response, and peering in a window saw Mrs. Ruth, ag on a couch. Calling Mrs. Ruth's nephew, "Jerry" Hambling, who lives next door, the men gained entrance through a window, finding that Mrs. Ruth had succumbed.

Mrs. Ruth, who lived alone, had evidently started to prepare a cup of tea for herself. A saucepan of water had been put on the electric stove, and her cup and saucer were in readiness. Survivors include three daughters and a son, who reside in Philadelphia.

TULLYTOWN RESIDENTS ARE WED ON SATURDAY

Norman L. Roberts Takes As His Bride Miss Evelyn
Jean Gerhart

TRIP TO NIAGARA FALLS

TULLYTOWN, Oct. 13—The Christian Church was the scene of a wedding on Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Norman Leighton Roberts took as his bride Miss Evelyn Jean Gerhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gerhart. Mr. Roberts is the son of Burgess and Mrs. Harold Roberts.

The ceremony was performed in the flower-decked edifice at two o'clock by the Rev. William Young. As the bridal party entered the church, the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Samuel Rogers, Bristol. Following the ceremony, the Mendelssohn march was played. Other selections by Mrs. Rogers were "I Love You Truly," "Oh, Promise Me," and "From the Heart." The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride was dressed in a gown of white satin and lace, made with a tight bodice, sweetheart neckline and leg-o-mutton sleeves, ending in points over the hands. The skirt ended in a train. Her veil was held by a crown of seed pearls and brilliants. Her bouquet was of white roses.

The former Miss Gerhart chose as her matron of honor the groom's sister, Mrs. Charles Robinson. The latter was gowned in peacock blue satin, made with a tight bodice, square neck and short puffed sleeves. The waist was trimmed with bands of wine-colored velvet, and the long hoop skirt was trimmed with a bow of the same. Her hat was of peacock-blue satin, trimmed with streamers of wine velvet.

The bridesmaids were Miss Viola Schaffer, Penn Valley; and Mrs. William Burkhardt. They wore long pink taffeta gowns, with bolero jackets; shoulder-length veils falling from maroon-toned crowns. Their accessories were white. The attendants carried bouquets of pink roses.

Mr. Roberts chose as his best man his brother-in-law, Mr. Charles Robinson. Ushers included his brother, Mr. Ralph Roberts, and Mr. Lester Gerhart, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for members of the families, and friends of the newly-weds. Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Roberts left for a motor trip to Niagara Falls. Mrs. Roberts' travelling costume included a dress of navy blue suede jersey, with coat and accessories of black.

Mrs. Gerhart, mother of the bride, was gowned in blue velvet with blue accessories, and wore a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother, Mrs. Harold Roberts, wore a gown of soldier blue with black accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.

After the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts will reside with the former's parents. Mr. Roberts graduated from Bristol high school, and is associated with his father in the florist business.

Leaps To Death

Philadelphia, Oct. 13—An unidentified woman about 45 years old leaped to death into Wissahickon Creek from the 150-foot-high Walnut Lane bridge in Fairmount Park today.

Fresh Soviet Troops Hurdled Into Fray

Moscow, Oct. 13—Soviet Russia today hurled fresh, rested troops into the battle of Vyazma today to counteract effects of a "surprise" German onslaught against Moscow which compelled evacuation of Bryansk.

Reviewing the situation on Russia's blood-soaked western front, the Communist newspaper Pravda said that "entirely fresh regular troops" as well as others previously engaged that had been resting in the rear had arrived at the Vyazma front.

Morale throughout is excellent, the paper said. The Red troops are well-equipped, warmly-dressed and ready to meet the reinforcements being rushed to the front by the German high command.

Report "Panicky Exodus" From Moscow

Berlin, Oct. 13—Heavy cannonading by German guns "outside the gates of Moscow" resulted today in a "panicky exodus" from the Soviet capital, German military officials announced, as front-line dispatches told of advanced Nazi mechanized units only 50 miles from Moscow.

On the basis of previous "blitz" campaigns carried out by the German armies, the troops mercilessly converging on Moscow from various points along a 750-mile battlefield presumably could reach the capital in a week or less.

Once again, however, there were indications the Germans might pass Moscow by on the theory its usefulness as a capital and a rallying point of morale would be vitiated by appearance of huge Nazi legions far to the east between Moscow and the Urals.

In this connection, German authorities expressed belief that Premier Stalin probably would remain in Moscow until the "last minute" despite the present "exodus" for fear of his own abandonment of the capital would result in complete Russian moral collapse.

Hundreds of thousands of Russians lie dead on the Vyazma battlefield, it was said, and military spokesmen declared this campaign, heralded as the greatest and bloodiest in all the history of warfare, was nearing its end.

PLAN A TURKEY DINNER

SELLERSVILLE, Oct. 13—Succeeding Herman F. Winzer, resigned, Philip Coll was elected chief of Sellersville Fire Company, No. 1, at a meeting of the company held last week.

To fill the vacancy of assistant chief, W. Lee Wilhelm was elected. Ballots were cast in each case, with Joseph Hufnagle running against Wilhelm and Councilman William Steeley opposing Coll.

A new fire alarm system also was arranged for at the company meeting. This was necessary because there had been an arrangement whereby the chief would answer fire calls by telephone. Assistant Chief Wilhelm will receive the alarms at his home on North Main street, and he in turn will sound the general alarm.

Joseph Hufnagle, who presided, announced a turkey dinner will be held in November for the benefit of the company at the fire hall. The Ladies' Auxiliary will assist in preparing the meal.

Routine reports were submitted by George Harmon and David Bealer. The latter stated that $779 remains in the general fund. Of this, $500 was ordered to be applied to the company debt.

A nominating committee to prepare a slate of new officers for the coming year consists of Dr. Floyd Frederick, Walter Smith, Gilbert Scheetz, George Shelly and Walter Anweiler.

Assembled in the Friends' meeting house, at Newtown, for the first time this season a few nights ago, the Newtown Young Friends conducted an election, results of which were as follows: President, Malcolm Swayne; vice-president, Marianne Buckman; secretary, Marise Kenderline, and treasurer, Walter Mammel.

Plans for the program to be presented throughout the year were made during the evening. A committee to make arrangements for the Hallowe'en party to be held at Camp Onas on Saturday evening, October 18th, also held a meeting. Young Friends from all sections of the county will be invited to attend the social.

Paul Kessler, aged 7, a first grade pupil in the school at Richboro, is receiving treatment in the Abington Hospital for what has been diagnosed as a mild attack of infantile paralysis.

The child, one of several children of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kessler, was taken ill a few days ago, and was removed to the hospital on Monday. The other children in the Kessler home, which has been placed under quarantine, are not of school age.

Immediately after it became known that the child was suffering from paralysis, health authorities directed that the local school, in which pupils from grades one to 12 are enrolled, be closed, and the local school officials took action promptly by suspending sessions on Tuesday.

The supervising principal, Raymond O. Gilbert, announced yesterday that sessions will be resumed next Monday morning unless more cases develop in the community.

The first meeting of the season of the Junior New Century Club was held at the club house with about 25 members present. The resignation of the president, Mrs. Hazel Errico, was accepted, and Miss Betty Gore, the vice-president, will fill the unexpired term.

Ways of raising money for the coming year were discussed and it was decided to hold a bake sale in the near future. Mrs. Anna White was appointed chairman of the committee to make arrangements.

Announcement of the annual collection of garments for the Needlework Guild of America was made, and each member was asked for a donation of garments to be handed in at the next meeting on November 6th.

At the executive committee meeting held a few days previous it was decided to hold one meeting a month instead of two meetings. After adjournment a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

244 HAVE ENROLLED

Latecomers who want to register for the Adult School will have a last chance tonight at 7:30 at the second of the ten weekly sessions in the Bristol high school. A total of 244 men and women are attending the 13 courses being given.

School officials advise those who want to take discontinued courses, like current events or effective speech, to remember that the second semester starts in January. If there is sufficient registration in any course offered, it will be given that semester.

New courses planned for January include jewelry making and everyday psychology, but these, and all the others, will stand or fall by the number of registrants.

Right now there is no more room in the advanced dressmaking and advanced typing courses for this semester. But most of the others can accommodate anyone starting tonight, and tomorrow night's social dancing class has space for a few more couples.

Even the sketching and painting class has a vacant chair or two, and big things are brewing in this group. Last week, on opening night, the instructor, Michael Fiorello, of the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts, looked around the room with a speculative eye.

"This class is big enough for a life class. Big enough to have a live model," he said, a bit wistfully.

Nobody said anything but interest was apparent. "I guess you'd have to get the approval of the Board of Education for anything like that," Mr. Fiorello continued.

One of the class spoke up. "I think the Board of Education will approve," he said. No one laughed at this presumptuous pupil speaking for the heads of the local school system. He had every right to say what he did.

THE PUTTERS

The world's workers are divided into two classes—those who work energetically and effectively, and those who fuss and putter over their tasks and take an inordinate amount of time.

A putterer might be defined as a slow and dawdling worker who directs the motions of his hands in an aimless and incompetent way, wasting time by feeble and ill directed motions, failing to give due attention to his work, letting his mind wander while the work drags along. Many people seem to fear that if they work hard they will work themselves out of a job. When men were put to work during the depression to give something in return for the relief money they were receiving, some of them did an amazing amount of puttering.

The putterers have to stop frequently to watch cars or trains go by, or to light their pipes, or to see what their neighbors are doing. Men who have been unemployed for a time seem particularly prone to lost working power, and the task that should be fairly easy really seems hard.

Most people dislike idleness and when they take a job they put in big licks to show they appreciate the chance and are determined to put in their money's worth of effort. That attitude promotes recovery in time of depression and gets things done in time of defense emergency.

MAN TAKES TO THE CHASE

Some sympathetic people feel that the ancient sport of hunting is contrary to modern compassionate regard for dumb creatures. They prefer to see game creatures running and flying around alive in their natural state, and get no pleasure from killing them and bringing them home in a game bag.

But the sport of hunting is perhaps the most ancient custom in the world. If the human race has inhabited this planet in somewhat its present physical form for 100,000 years, it seems clear that most of that time human beings have pursued the wild animals and used them for food. As soon as man became capable of using tools, he must have begun to fashion instrument with which he could attack beast and birds. An instinct that runs back so many centuries is not easily rooted out.

Indiscriminate slaughter of wild life has wiped out of fields and forests many useful creatures.

The good sportsman seeks to protect wild life and to encourage it to grow so that there is constant replacement. He is a conservationist instead of an exterminator. If all game laws could be enforced many woodlands and fields now destitute of game would see these creatures flourishing again.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Doron Green

A mud circus! What a peculiar name! What is it? Before the time when circuses had grown large enough to warrant the payment of the extra expense necessary to travel on the railroad, they made use of wagons on the highways. Inasmuch as the roads were unimproved and the circuses were obliged to travel in all kinds of weather, and the muddy condition of the roads during and immediately following a storm were a serious obstacle to travel, the circus soon acquired the nickname of "mud circus."

The young people of today can't imagine the thrill that came from watching a mud circus come into town in those early years. Around four o'clock in the morning the tent wagons arrived. They were always sent ahead of the circus proper so that the tents could be erected and everything made ready to house the circus when it arrived. By seven o'clock the children began to arrive at the Otter street bridge at South Bristol. Where the entrance gates to the Bristol Cemetery now stand there was a turn in the road, after rounding which the turnpike could be seen almost to Schenks Station (Croydon).

In a short time one might think that all the children in Bristol were congregated to welcome the circus upon its arrival. The crowd eventually moved down to the turn of the road, then followed a period of watchful waiting. After a time some of the boys who had climbed trees to obtain the first view began to shout: "Here she comes! Here she comes!" The excitement immediately grew intense and many of the older children started down the road to meet the circus.

Soon the wagons put in an appearance. The manager occupied the larger number. The beautiful band wagon, with its tiers of seats for the musicians, was always an interesting feature. Lying down on top of the wagons or crouched inside wherever possible could be seen the performers and working men. The life of an actor was not a bed of roses in those days. The elephants were always of interest to the children. The bridge across the Otter Creek was constructed of wood and not strong enough to bear the weight of an elephant. In consequence, the animals were guided down the steep bank on the south side of the creek, waded across, then conducted back to the road on the other side. How the children did enjoy themselves as they stood on the bridge and watched the careful movements of these huge animals.

The wagons would stop at Otter and Locust street and soon all was bustle and excitement as the parade was gotten together. The band wagon, drawn by well-groomed horses, always led the procession. On one occasion the band wagon was drawn by 40 white horses and driven by one man. This feature was the talk of the town for years afterward and no circus ever produced a special feature that equaled it.

The parade would get under way about 10 o'clock and after passing through the business streets would end at the circus grounds. By this time the side shows had erected their tents and were open for business.

People often wonder how the circus grew to such great proportions and how the extra rings came to be installed. It is said upon good authority that after P. T. Barnum entered the circus business the attendance at his shows became so large that it became a serious question as to how to provide accommodations for the spectators. Calling his leading men together he told them of his problem and asked for suggestions. First it was suggested to make the tent oblong but this was objected to because the people in the extreme ends would be too far away to appreciate the show. Finally someone suggested that the tent be made oblong but that another ring be added and duplicate shows be given in each ring. This proved to be the solution and Barnum introduced the first two-ring circus. As the attendance increased the tent was made longer and more rings added until we have the huge circus of today with its many rings and platforms.

Although the circuses of today are immense in their proportions and offer more than one can see at one time, yet they cannot take away the thrill and the interest and the excitement of those old-time one-ring mud circuses. The clown was a feature of the show. He could act, sing, ride bareback, and act on the horizontal bars. Gardner, who became a star in the Barnum circus because of his jumping act, started his career in a one-ring mud circus which exhibited in Bristol. It can be said to the credit of the one-ring circuses that most of the features presented in the large circuses of today are but a repetition or an amplification of the stunts that were exhibited in the old-time mud circuses of our childhood.

I have been thinking of the elderly men of today who when boys enjoyed these experiences which I have recounted. Thomas Scott, Edward Keating, Merton Randall, Dr. Joseph T. Stradling, Pemberton Minster, William K. Fine. What pleasant memories will be awakened in their minds as they read this story of the old time mud circuses and live over again those happy boyhood days.

Four other Republican members of the committee, Reps. Chipperfield, Ill.; Vorys, Ohio; Mundt, S. British Forces Land at White Sea Port

Stockholm, Oct. 13—The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet today reported that a British expeditionary force of 40,000 men has been landed at Archangel. Another attacking force of undisclosed strength has been put ashore at an unidentified port on the White Sea, it was said.

Landing of British troops at Archangel or elsewhere on the White Sea of Soviet Russia would represent an undertaking daring in the extreme but might prove of immense value with the Russo-German campaign in its present phase.

Archangel itself lies at the extreme tip of the Great Northern Sea, 700 miles due northwest of Moscow.

SENATE STENOGRAPHER by MAXWELL THAYER

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

When Gale opened the door, two men, one in uniform, stared sternly at her.

"What's the trouble?" It was the plainclothes man.

"Nothing. There's no trouble here!"

"Come on, lady, don't give us that," he said. "Somebody called headquarters and said two men were fighting and that one had been killed."

"There's no dead body in here," "Let's look," the uniformed officer said, and started forward. Gale slipped the burglar chain in place just as his shoe went into the crack.

"Have you a warrant?"

"Well, no, but if we've any suspicion that a crime has been committed, we don't need one," he rumbled.

"This is Senator Murray's apartment," Gale said, "and if you want to break in here, come right ahead, but don't say I didn't warn you."

The cop hesitated; he and the plainclothes man talked it over.

"Now look, sister—" "I'm not anyone's sister."

"See here, madame—" "And I'm not a madame—"

"Well, gosh, lady," he began with apology in his voice and in his facial expression, "we're only trying to do our duty. Now why don't you open up and let us have a look-see, then we can go back and report it was a phoney."

Gale glanced at the sofa. Murray had aroused from his prone position. He was sitting on the edge of the chesterfield, nursing an ice pack.

"All right," Gale began, hardly able to suppress a smile.

Gale slipped the latch, and the two walked in cautiously.

Once inside, the detective spotted Murray. "Who are you?" he said, and his voice was gruff.

The senator didn't like anybody right then. He glared out from under the ice pack, one baleful eye fixed on the detective. "And just what are you doing here?" He said it with all the forcefulness he could muster.

"This," Gale said, gesturing toward the police, "is the strong arm of the law, looking for the body."

"What body?" Murray grumbled, and exclaimed, "Oh, my head!"

Elaine came in from the kitchen with a fresh ice-pack, stopped and stared at the men.

"Who are you?" the police asked in unison.

Gale cut in with, "Suppose we all sit down and introduce ourselves." And she sat in a handy chair. "I am Gale Holoway, secretary to Senator Murray, whom you see seated yonder with an ice-pack. 'This,' and she pointed toward Elaine, "is a friend indeed who is helping out."

Suddenly Senator Murray glared with one eye again. "Just what do you officers mean by breaking in here in the middle of the night?"

Hattingly, the plainclothes man explained the report they were investigating.

Then the police left, but not before they had agreed to report that the alarm had been false.

After they were gone, Gale and Elaine helped Murray to his feet and supported him to bed. Elaine was all for calling a doctor, but both Murray and Gale quickly vetoed the idea.

Elaine went to get him a fresh ice-pack, this time for his swelling leg. She came back with the pack and, placing it against his chin, turned out the light. As they were going out, Jeff said: "I'll never forget this, girls. I'll see you are taken care of—" They shut the door.

MacCorkle-Mabery Nuptials
Occur In St. James' Church

A marriage of interest to many was solemnized in St. James' Episcopal Church on Saturday afternoon at the hour of three, when Miss Elizabeth M. Mabery, daughter of Mrs. Rose Mabery, 841 Garden street, became the wife of Mr. James R. MacCorkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. William MacCorkle, Newport Road, Bristol Township.

The officiating clergyman was the rector of the church, the Rev. George E. Boswell; and the vocalist, Mr. Percy G. Ford, who sang "At Dawning" and "O Promise Me" was accompanied by "O Minerva Epstein, who also provided music for the processional and recessional.

Mr. Lester Mabery, of Tullytown, gave his cousin, the bride, in marriage.

Attendants of the former Miss Mabery were inclusive of: Miss Elna Madsen, Colonia, N. J., as maid of honor; Miss Margaret Stephenson, Jefferson avenue, and Miss Hannah Rockel, Washington street, bridesmaids.

Mr. Percy Leedom, Southampton, was groomsmen for Mr. MacCorkle; and ushers were Messrs. Norman Corkle, the latter a brother of the groom.

A white gown of imported Duchess lace and net was chosen by the bride for her wedding day. The long torso was fashioned of lace, and the skirt of net was arranged bouffant style, ending in a long train. Her veil of bridal illusion, arranged in tiers, was held in place by a crown of orange blossoms. The bride carried a shower bouquet of white rose-buds.

The costume of the maid of honor, Miss Madsen, included a gown of blue tone, the long torso being of lace, and the full bouffant skirt being made of mouseline de soie, this ending in a sweep. Her bouquet was of yellow rose-buds. The bridesmaids wore long torso gowns of bois de rose, the full skirts being of mouseline de soie. Each attendant wore a halo of flowers and a veil to match her gown. Slippers were in the same color tones. The bridesmaids carried pink rose-buds.

Following a reception at Leghorn Farms, near Morrisville, Mr. MacCorkle and his bride left for a few days' journey to New York City. The bride's travelling costume was a peacock blue woolen suit, her accessories being of brown. She wore a corsage of yellow chrysanthemums. The two plan to reside at 111 Taylor street.

Mrs. Mabery, mother of the bride, wore for the church ceremony a gown of blue velvet with white lace yoke; black felt hat, and a corsage of pink rose-buds. Mrs. MacCorkle, the groom's mother, was attired in a blue gown, a hat of black felt, and wore a pink rose-bud corsage.

The former Miss Mabery is a graduate of Bristol high school; Peirce Business School, and the John Wanamaker Commercial Institute, Philadelphia. Mr. MacCorkle graduated from Southampton high school.

BRISTOL HIGH SCHOOL TEAM GLIDES THROUGH TO A 33 TO 0 VICTORY OVER LANGHORNE HIGH ELEVEN

By Jack Gill

Playwick field in Langhorne absorbed another one of those gridiron annihilations Saturday afternoon. Bristol High School found the atmosphere to their liking and glided through to a 33 to 0 victory. The win averaged last year's 6 to 0 victory tallied by the losers and gave the Bunnies an undisputed grip on first place in the Lower Bucks conference.

Offensive minded Bristol has scored 55 points in its last two games. Today, at this early stage, the squad is one victory ahead of last season's record. The score in the Langhorne game was checkmated only because Bartholomew substituted practically his entire personnel.

Armand Capriotti continued his mad scoring pace by tallying two more touchdowns, and Tom Galzerano equalled him by duplicating the feat. Rosser went across for the Cards' only other six-pointer.

Bristol was so superior Saturday that they were forced to punt seldom. The Redskins threatened only once on a play that was nullified by a backfield in motion penalty. Whenever they did gain possession of the ball they either transgressed backwards or remained stationary.

Capriotti, DiAngelo and "Skamper" Scancellia ran at will through the left side of Langhorne's line that was woefully weak at times. Even substitute backs had a gay time during the moments they were in the game.

Bristol struck swiftly. It took but ten sharp plays to penetrate into Playwick's pay dirt. Rosser, whose great play calling has been one of the Bunnies' outstanding characteristics, mixed Bristol's formations in fine sequence all afternoon. Capriotti lugged the kick-off to mid-field. Then he and DiAngelo made it a first in two plays to the 40. After Galzerano went off tackle to the 37, Capriotti was met successfully at the line of scrimmage and repulsed. DiAngelo found a big hole to the 30 yard stripe and later went around his own left side to the 25. Capriotti took a reverse to the 19 and Galzerano hit center to the 5. On the next play Galzerano had a touchdown. Capriotti's run for the extra point failed.

The Cardinals were doing things in an unrestrained fashion. Once they gained possession of the ball they were unstoppable in the opening minutes. More than anything, it aptly proved the power of the first team. The reserve found the going a bit more difficult.

After Langhorne received the kick-off and could do nothing, the Bunnies took command on a poor punt on the Redskins' forty-five. Two long runs, one by Capriotti and the other by DiAngelo, intermixed with line smashes by Galzerano, found the locals resting comfortably on the two yard marker. Galzerano had little trouble easing over. Rosser took a pass from Capriotti that jumped Bristol's advantage to 13-0. At this juncture the second team left the hard playing conditions that usually are a part of the bench situation.

Langhorne stayed in the ball game by recovering a Bristol fumble on the Cardinals 45-yard line. Two plays netted little yardage, so Norman Knox faded back to punt. Big Smokey Smoyer came in fast along with Rieble and Veitch to block the kick on the forty.

"Skamper" Scancellia then entered the scene. This back gave a sparkling performance that rated him as a distant prospect. A hard, fast runner with plenty of "moxie," he literally tore Langhorne's left side to shreds. Taking the ball from the short man, he went through on a straight course from the forty to the twenty on his first stab. Rosser sped to the 18 and Scancellia advanced to the 8. Chapin tried to go over but fumbled and recovered on the 10. But Scancellia powered his way to the one on the next play, making it a first down. Chapin couldn't gain through tackle and Scancellia broke through to push Scancellia back to the five in a nice maneuver. Breaking away from the line, Rosser went around his own right end to up the total to 19-0. He then split the cross-boys on a perfect placement.

Chie's DiAngelo broke loose in the third quarter on a play through the center of the Langhorne line and hot-footed his way thirty-five yards to the Langhorne forty. The same back led another sustained march to the six yard stripe from where Capriotti went across. His placement was good and Bristol led, 27 to 0.

After this score Langhorne showed its best offensive ability of the day, and with Clark and Cloak leading the way marched to two successive first downs. But later Clark threw a pass that Capriotti intercepted on the Bristol 40 yard line. Behind very good blocking he sped down the sidelines for a sixty-yard touchdown. From then on it was 33 to 0.

Theron Foster, a substitute end who came into the game in place of Flannery, took a pass from the Langhorne 45 yard line and lumbered his way to the five before being tackled. But a backfield in motion penalty ruined the job. Shortly thereafter the game ended.

FALLS ALUMNI WINS THIRD STRAIGHT GAME

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 13—Playing before the largest crowd of the season, the Falls Alumni team won its third consecutive game yesterday afternoon on Island field, defeating the West Conshohocken A. A. eleven, 7-2, in a well-played tilt.

Player "Popeye" Lovett pulled a "Ripley Believe It or Not" stunt in the game when he scored the entire nine points of the game, seven for his club and two for the opposition.

Lovett scored the Falls' touchdown from the one-yard line when he crashed through the center of the line. He promptly added the extra point to give Falls a 7-0 lead which lasted until the third quarter.

In this session, the Conshy team opened up with its aerial attack and brought the ball to the Falls' fifteen yard stripe. From this marker another pass was thrown and Lovett intercepted in the end zone. He attempted to run the ball out but was nailed in his tracks to give the Conshohocken team the two-point safety.

The Alumni aggregation rolled up eleven first downs to the visitors' three. After the first period which saw Fallington score in the first few minutes, the Alumni boys went on the defense and did not open up on its offensive attack.

It is most likely that the Falls team will not play at home next week, attempting to hook an away game.
